STATECRAFT SIMULATION

Simulations in International Relations are an effective learning tool that enables students to better understand complex political processes and dynamics of the international system. These simulations provide interactive environments with real-world scenarios, allowing students to enhance their diplomatic skills. By assuming the roles of different countries, students have the opportunity to engage in international negotiations, crisis management, and the negotiation of international agreements. These simulations not only develop practical skills of students but also foster analytical thinking, problem-solving, and communication skills of them.
